Central Asia Fintech Summit 2025: financial sector and fintech companies to discuss digital transformation projects

October 1, 2025

The National Bank, together with the National Payment Corporation of Kazakhstan and the Kazakhstan Fintech Network, announces the Central Asia Fintech Summit 2025 (CAFS 2025).

CAFS 2025 will take place in Almaty on November 13-14 and will serve as a key regional platform to discuss trends and challenges in financial technology. The program includes plenary sessions, panel discussions, expert roundtables and presentations of innovative digital finance solutions.

Objective of the event is to enhance Kazakhstan's position as a regional fintech hub, develop international cooperation and share best practices between regulators, financial organizations and technology companies.

Representatives of central banks, international organizations, financial institutions, fintech companies and mass media are invited to participate.

The National Bank is a key partner of the event, which will cover strategic development of the financial sector, digital transformation and innovation. Full information about the program, speakers, participation and registration requirements is available on the event's official website: centralasiafintech.kz.
