PUBLIC INFORMATION NOTICE

On updating the format for publishing analytical materials on inflation and inflation expectations

Astana

March 16, 2026

To improve the system of analytical publications and prevent duplication of information, the National Bank is updating the format and frequency of materials on inflation and inflation expectations. In particular, the frequency of publication of analytical materials on inflation will be reduced.

At the same time, the analytical information published in the “Inflation Trends” and “Inflation Expectations” reports will continue to be regularly reflected in the Monetary Policy Report, as well as in the National Bank’s press releases. This will allow for a more comprehensive analysis of inflationary processes in the context of monetary policy.

Statistical data on household inflation expectations will continue to be posted on the National Bank’s official website. Estimated and analytical information on inflation, including seasonally adjusted and core inflation, will be published as a part of the informational support for decisions on the base rate.

Analytical information on “Inflation Trends in the Regions” will also be transitioned to the format of informational support for the base rate decisions.
